VIENNA - Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, target of furious attacks from Moscow, has resigned, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported today.

Hajek was apparently the first victim of a rumored purge list drawn up by the Kremlin.

Meanwhile a meeting of Czech and Soviet leaders set for Friday in Moscow was postponed until next week. No reason Czech Premier Oldrich Cernik will act as foreign minister replacing Hajek, according to the Czech news agency.

The agency added that, on the recommendation of the government, the president had dismissed Karel Hoffman as head of the Central Board of Communications.

It was not clear from the CTK dispatch whether Premier Cernik would act as foreign minister permanently.

Hajek, 55, has been a target of Soviet criticism since he pleaded his country's case at the United Nations following the Warsaw Pact invasion Aug. 20-21.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia accused him of working for the Nazis during the Second World War and said he now was an ally of the "dark forces of reaction and

Saanich Motion Wins Support

By JIM HUME Times City Hall Reporter

VANCOUVER — Municipal representatives today voted overwhelmingly in favor of a study of possible controls to halt excessive land speculation.

In supporting the Saanich resolution, Union of B.C. Muni-cipalities delegates went against an executive recommendation that the resolution be defeated. The executive argued that any controls introduced would be "almost unenforceable."

The stand brought charges that the executive was running away from controversial issues Ald John Cannon of North Cowichan asked how the execu-

"I think this executive again running away from controversial issue, from a decision they know will be unpopular," he said.

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning who moved the resolution, said she realized it would touch off controversy and likely have stormy going.

"But this is an extremely serious situation and all that we are asking is that the executive study the problem and bring in some recommendations." She won support from Ald. Pat Flattery of North Vancouver who asked that the executive also study the possibility of land to control speculation while reducing taxes on improvements.

He was replying in the Commons to questions Robert Thompson (PC-Red Deer). the former Credit leader, about Quebec's plan to make French the official working language of the province.

Mr. Thompson asked whether the federal government, in preparing the lan-guages bill it intends to present to Parliament this session, had consulted Quebec.

Mr. Trudeau said the federal bill will have only an indirect effect on Quebec, since it will be concerned only with fields of constitutional jurisdiction. The bill is to establish areas in which French and English are to have equal status in the work of federal departments and

From Seine to Pedernales

IT IS DIFFICULT, IF NOT IMpossible, to isolate the Vietnam peace talks in Paris from the United States election campaign. While all three presidential candidates cast alternate glances at the talks and the Vietnam war front, the Hanoi spokesman must be keeping an eye on the campaigners. The confusion of the election, with its declarations of Vietnam policy and counter-declarations, is admirably fitted for Ambassador Xuan Thuy to improve his bargaining position—and also to exert some influence on the course of the campaign itself.

In Wednesday's heated exchange of statements at Paris the current cause of deadlock was capsuled once more in Hanoi's suggestion that an unconditional halt in bombing would be followed by political discussions, and the United States reply that first Hanoi must make a corresponding gesture to reduce its military action. The United States sees such a reduction as a proof of Hanoi's good intentions - a genuine desire to end the hostilities. Without such a move, say the Americans, the North Vietnamese would merely use a bombing halt to improve their military position unhampered by air ofholds out long enough the United States will give in on the point and make its current partial bombing pause a complete one. On the other hand the United States must hope that the course of the war now reported will move Hanoi to settle for the best bargain it can get.

At this point the United States election campaign enters. There can be little doubt that President Johnson would be happy to close his career with an announcement of a cease-fire in Vietnam and the opening of discussions for a settlement. This would cap his pending retirement with a resounding personal triumph, temper much of the harsh criticism to which he has been subjected, and remove the most damaging campaign issue from the shoulders of his Democratic would-be successor. Mr. Humphrey. In an allout election battle on the domestic issues of race and poverty Mr. Humphrey would then be in a much better position to overcome the Nixon and Wallace challenges and score a victory in November.

Paris therefore could hold one key to the White House for the hard-pressed Democrats. The United States negotiators may exert a strong effort to rephrase the position of both sides so as to make a compromise possible. The next few weeks could see some very skilful semantic manoeuvres.

cannot lose money. Any risk involvfirm to avoid the burden of taxation.

Because of the crown corporation arrangement it will escape the tax catch the attention of Ottawa and ministers resigned earlier this year in protest over the affair, but they were unable to break the premier's tight control over the legislature and the province. Now Ottawa is taking a hard look at the whole situation.

Two aspects are clear: First, the federal government will lose large tax revenues over 15 years by reason of the crown corporation dodge, and the people of Newfoundland will receive little if anything from the deal.

And secondly, this sort of give-away approach to private industry could encourage other provincial govern-competition to lure new projects with exorbitant concessions. Premier

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Usher in a Different Sort of Parliament

FROM the standpoint of the spectators crowding the public galleries, leaders' day in the House of Commons was a dull affair, completely devoid of the fire, passion and spirited challenges traditionally expected such occasions, Mr. Stanfield's performance was perhaps the more readily understandable. With one general election barely over, it is improbable parties will face another for at least four years. This plainly was not the time for an all-out onslaught on a government with a fresh mandate and small opportunity as yet to prove its worth. But it seems probable that the prime minister was guided by more complex calculations.

Like every previous leader of the Opposition at the opening of every session since Confederation, Mr. Stanfield found the Speech dulf, flat, depressing, a major disappointment. Fortunately he did not permit his forebodings to steal away his sense of humor and he worked in some good jabs at ministerial generosity to defeated Liberals, There had, he said, been much talk of regional desks, computers, brain banks and talent banks, "A whole sophisticated apparatus has been installed. But it is still the pork barrel where the action is at."

One had the impression, however, that Mr. Stanfield was primarily concerned to get a number of points on record at the very beginning of this Parliament. First, there is the procedural issue, now in negotiation. This he touched on only lightly, making the point that the Conservatives would resist any proposal calculated to impair fundamentally their constitutional responsibility as a loyal Opposition. Mr. Stanfield also scored the government on the matter of secrecy; perhaps a minor complaint now but one with future possibilities.

Drew on Report

The matters chiefly on his mind, however, were the war on poverty, and Mr. Trudeau's just society. As was to be expected, he drew heavily on the latest report of the Economic Council of Canada, Here he seemed to have a double purpose; to produce retroactive justification for certain stands he had taken during the election (for example, with respect to the guaranteed minimum income) and to tax the government with omissions revealed by impartial experts.

For the Conservatives, the just society is so much rhetoric. Having served the Liberals very well in the election campaign, it has now made them vulnerable for the future. Mr. Stanfield will do his best to ensure that this particular slogan recoils on its author. He was in fact remarkably candid. Referring to the speech from the throne, he said: "There is a repetition of the slogan, 'the just society,' It is already becoming almost a parody of itself. Its currency is being devalued."

To further the process of devaluation, Mr. Stanfield moved a rather clever amendment accusing the government of failure to provide Parliament "with an agenda of priorities to define and implement the just society."

Ignored Stanfield

Mr. Trudeau delivering his first major speech as prime minister, virtually ignored the Stanfield thrusts and seemed bent on lowering the temperature - which had risen very little in cies to deal with the growing problem of any case. Although he leaned rather nonchalantly against the back of his desk, he did not appear relaxed. He relied heavily on a prepared text, speaking quickly in a low voice that varied little as he moved from point to point and back and forth from French to English. There were no dramatics, no attempts to rouse his followers, scarcely a gesture to lighten the performance. It is probable that Mr. Trudeau made only the slightest of changes in his prepared remarks as a result of the Opposition attack. Without doubt he had anticipated the general line that Mr. Stanfield would take and his speech was prepared with that in mind. One had the impression, however, that he was not seeking controversy but rather endeavoring to minimize it. Particularly in his comments on procedural reform, he appeared anxious to alleviate the suspicions of other parties. While emphasizing the increasing pressure of necessary business on parliamentary time, he stressed that any reform proposals must assist both sides; that anything less would be self-defeating and that changes ought not to upset the delicate balance between government and opposition.

In marked contrast to his predecessor on such occasions. Mr. Trudeau revealed very little that was new. It was a notably moderate speech; in essence a generalized exposition of the government's approach to problems in both the domestic and foreign fields.

Poverty was no new discovery of the Economic Council of Canada. The revolution of rising expectations was bound to affect the people of this country because of our proximity to the most prosperous nation on earth. But Mr. Trudeau, in perhaps the key passage of his speech, warned that it would be irresponsible not to point out the limits of the immediately attainable or to permit an increase in inflationary pressures. Even if no new programs were introduced, the costs of the old were mounting so swiftly that social security demands on the federal treasury could double in four years. It was for this reason that a cabinet committee had been set up to make a special study of

Almost Monotonous

In recent years there has been much criticism of Parliament on the general ground that gladiatorial combat takes precedence over the nation's business. Mr. Trudeau has been keenly conscious of this. His extremely restrained, almost monotonous speech was perhaps deliberately contrived to usher in what he hopes be a very different sort of Parliament, less attractive to the spectators but more productive in terms of work accomplished for the general welfare.

Opposed

The residents of Saanich have been told by a number of persons that the vote to be taken in late September regarding sewers involves only "housekeeping," that it will amalgamate the existing sewer projects and those proposed for the next five years, but that it in no way involves any other question such as sewage disposal.

Since the area proposed for sewer extension involves several thousand homes, it follows that the amount of sewage to be disposed of will increase consideraby by the end of the five-year period, and this comes at a time when the present method of dumping raw sewage into the ocean is unacceptable to a great many local residents. The voters of Saanich will be asked to approve the amalgamation of the various existing and proposed projects. This implies an approval for the possible continued and increased dumping of raw sewage into the ocean.

Many Saanich residents believe the question of how sewage is to be disposed of should be settled before any more major expansions of the sewer system are undertaken. In line with this, the members of the Saanich Action Committee feel the proposed referendum should be postponed until the disposal question is settled. If this question is not resolved first, the vote should fail, and we would then no doubt be faced with the expense of another vote a year or so later after the question has been faced and settled, - R. B. H. Ralfs. President, Saanich Action Committee, 5024 Echo Drive.

Commission

There is one aspect of acquiring a home which I never see mentioned in the newspapers - that is the real estate agent's commissions. Are they worth it?

I am often tempted to quote Christ's words when he said, "They toil not neither do they spin," yet they are continually skimming the cream off the price of property.

Just imagine having to pay one thousand or fourteen hundred dollars on $20,000 property. It's out of all proportion for the services rendered. The purchaser still has to pay all legal expenses on top of that. - David R. Beddows, R.R.1 Cobble Hill, B.C.

Too Lenient

I am 21 years old and serving in the Royal Canadian Navy. Everyday I read of "teenage vandalism" in the papers. Frankly I am amazed at what kids of my own age bracket will do for kicks nowadays. I'm not surprised that the adults of today are complaining. The only thing that surprises me is why they don't do something about it. The laws they have are so lenient that the kids don't give a damn.

I am by no means a sadist. I hate killings and disorder more than anyone. I do think however, that it is time we stiffen our laws, instead of slacking off.

Above all, let's get the youngster of today going down the right road. When I was a kid and got my summons for a Halloween prank, I feared my father's law more than the law of the country. The fifty dollars fine which my father had to pay wasn't bad at all. The restrictions and limitations set on me as a boy of sixteen for the next six months were a lot worse. My father loved me and cared-enough as to what kind of citizen I would turn out to be. - AB W. S. Zacharias.

An Appeal to Quebec

NOT without sin in matters bilingual for generations past, those of us who live in the Ontario glass house must be careful how we throw stones at French-only extremists in Saint-Leonard. Until well into this decade, all Ontario seemed one great English-only Saint-

Our province is changing. The majority of our citizens, the young and clear-sighted of every age, want to make or keep French a living language for both our country's language communities: perhaps half a million Englishspeaking youth now study French here, while about 108,000 French-speaking Ontarians attend mainly French schools with state support.

We must still make immense progress to equal the example of Quebec's past tolerance in bilingual schooling. But our intention is clear and firm enough to allow us to hope Quebec will find, in spite of Saint-Leonard, civilized and realistic language policies.

For this is a province-wide crisis. Extremists, both English- and Frenchspeaking, have proved they know Saint-Leonard is the bellwether of a whole people's mood. Some English-speaking Quebeckers show they still do not fully appreciate the common sense of learning well the language of the local majority; French-speaking separatists and unilingists smell the blood of an emotional revolution that could sweep Quebec out of Canada, Sorry little armchair Che Guevaras scríbble wildly for "10, 20, 50 Saint-Leonards". Meanwhile, Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal, amid rumors his Government may exploit the issue electorally, allows his ambiguities to leave in doubt Premier Daniel Johnson's promises to entrench the basic rights of Quebec's English-speaking minority. The compromise which stifled the high-school part of the Saint-Leonard squall does not in itself confirm these rights. The continuing boycott of seven elementary schools there by Englishspeaking parents who object to all-French teaching shows that the storm has not abated.

In short, beyond the accommodation at Aime Renaud High School there is an urgent need for clear new principles to guide parents, teachers and school commissioners on languages of teaching. These principles must try to match the ideal of a bilingual Canada with the reality of a Quebec where French will remain the language of the majority. This policy could rest on three notions outlined by Le Devoir's Claude Ryan and inspired by the Laurendeau-Dunton Com-

"The three norms of a policy of equality are simple: rejection of race or ethnic group as a primary factor of classification; reasonable equality of the two official languages in public services; freedom for each citizen to choose one or the other linguistic community."

* On the foundation of such a policy of equality, the Quebec Government could build a fair and realistic priority for French without violating the dignity or freedom of any resident of Quebec. It could try to make the French milieu more attractive, more desirable to join; it could inform immigrants of the advantages of learning the province's main language of government and culture; it could help English schools teach better French; and it could encourage management and labor to use French more often as a language of work. With patience and intelligence, time and even immigration might be made to serve French in Quebec, instead of threaten it.

One likes to hope Mr. Johnson will move quickly to fill the policy gap left or reopened -Minister of Education, As a man of moderation, the Premier was missed at Saint-Leonard. When he returns later this month from his prolonged illness, he must risk his reputation and his province's future in trying to square the circle of priority bilingualism. Mr. Ryan has explained the trick in theory. The Premier will not find the practice so

But we have always endeavored to be objective in our columns about labor. That we have attained some measure of success in this is testified to by the statement of Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, to the House of Commons committee on labor and employment last winter that he has yet to read anything in the Fisher-Crowe column with which he agrees.

Unrelenting Critics

We have, in fact, been unrelenting in our criticism of labor unions, their structure, their failure to evolve machinery for internal dissent, their inexcusable fraternizing with an unreformed Seafarers' International Union and the conduct of negotiations by some of them during what we labelled the "Expo wage spiral" of 1966 and 1967. In short, we are satisfied that we can be objective without being neutral. As a general statement we have sought to advocate those measures in industrial relations which we believe will promote harmony, which rational appreciation of facts indicates are workable and which conform to any reasonconcept of the public interest.

In fact the Rand Report may not unfairly be dismissed as an inquiry into labor disputes in Australia rather than in Ontario.

There is a wealth of literature on the irrelevance to North America of the experience of Australia where compulsory arbitration, a powerful labor party and the Commonwealth of Australia itself all came into existence at the

The Dutch Are Still Fighting Ages-Old Battle Against the Sea

Dutch, whose national affairs usually seem devoid of high drama, are pushing ahead with an epic battle they have waged for centuries.

Their enemy is the sea, an element constantly pawing at the armored coast and threatening to overwhelm a land of which much is below sea level.

The dikes forming vital defence lines in this struggle have been a feature of Dutch life since the 10th century. Three centuries later, men the Netherlands draining land of water and making it fit for farming and habitation. Such tracts became known as polders.

Currently this country of 12,000,000 people is rounding out a vast project which, started in 1927, has trans formed the old expanse of salt water known as the Zuyder Zee into a fresh-water stretch called Lake Yssel, or-in Dutch-Ijsselmeer.

Three big areas of the lake have been drained and turned into significant additions to crowded country's store of arable land.

Another such polder-South Flevoland, off Amsterdam-should be totally dry this year, while nearby Markerwaard is the last job of draining and conversion scheduled under the Zuyder

Rotterdam is busy with port expansion projects while the delta engineers press on with work which received its initial and decisive boost from a catastrophe which struck The N e therlands in February,

It was then that stormwhipped seas pounded through coastal dikes in the delta. Lost to the country were 375,000 acres of land-almost five per cent of its total-and, more poignantly, 1,800 persons left dead by the disaster.

On an earlier occasion, the Germans decided that to halt Second World War advance of Allied troops towards northeast Holland they would re-flood one of the Zuyder Zee polders.

On April 17, 1945, they blew two breaches in a key dike and the water rushed back in. Promptly after the final Nazi collapse, Dutch engin-eers set to work draining off the flood waters.

This took four months, compared with the 61/2 months spent on the original draining job in 1930.

McNamara's New Book Literary Bay of Pigs

by Robert S, McNamara, Harper & Row. 176p.

He has written the book and permitted it to be published and it is fair game. So is he, The author says in the preface that his work is not a emoir, nor a personal recol lection and in any case will not be a financial bonanza; the money goes to a university to establish a lecture

"I have thought that it might be useful to have published in one volume the principles and philosophy by which I have directed the activities of the defence estabment," writes Robert S. McNamara, for seven years the chief executive officer of an outfit which directly employs four million people and manages roughly half federal budget.

Brilliantly Wrong

This book is a collection of speeches, statements and testimony to committees of congress. It indicates the man; brilliant, civilized, courageous, rational, precise, dazzlingly up-to-date — and frequently wrong. The book has been rapturously reviewed for its insight into the special problems of the cold war, for its lucid commentary on Soviet-American relations, for its rational analysis of first-

Two cheers, then, for reason: but it is somehow indecent that the man who presided over the enlargement of the war in South Vietnam does not see fit, in his first book, to print the speeches and the statements, the testimony to congress and the press conferences that would help us see how we got from ere to there, how the war began, how it grew, the assumptions on which the assumptions on which the defence establishment as Mc-Namara calls it - operated.

Single Sentence

There is a single sentence which sets forth the secretary's own view of the war; we find ourselves engaged in a conflict with North Vietnam and its South Vietsupporters to serve the principle that political change must not be brought about by externally directed violence and force. There are some who feel that the problem is not in North Vietnam, but in South Vietnam — the place, after all, where the war is being fought - but to labor the point is unproductive. Me Namara will presumably deal with the war at a later date, in another book. If Robert Lowell wants to write a poem about penguins, then the critic must address himself to penguins, whether he likes the subject or not.

it is about penguins! NATO, "mutual deterrence the titan versus the minute-"Flexible response," polycentrism in eastern Europe, efforts at desegregating the American military, jettisoning the atomic air-plane, the "thin" versus the 'thick" anti-missile system.

There are dealt with as relics of the cold war, including the last, which is very, very carefully discussed. They are revealed in the language of the mathemetician: pre-cise, quadratical and

Lots on NATO

There are large sections devoted to NATO, to postulates of a Soviet thrust to Germany or France, "The military role of NATO . . . will remain as necessary in the foreseeable future as it has been in the past."

Comment from the author: "In my view, NATO has important military functions to perform for many years to come. I am convinced, however, that it can perform them satisfactorily only if it becomes more flexible, first in the means at its disposal and second in its plans for using them." Europe, Me-Namara advised us a sentence before, "has a primary claim on our military resources."

But one reads with horrified fascination the very few pas-sages which deal with Asia: Thailand and Laos, for example, "Threatened by externally supported insur-

Experts Disagree

That is, ah, not quite the view held by experts in the field. In Thailand, it is not external aggression that worries men on the scene but demonstrable corruption and sluggishness of the Thai duced internal (indigenous, to use the argot) insurgency. He writes: "the Thais' own northeastern provinces has

That is one way to put it. Another way might be to ask why there has been "minimal contact" by the central government. Eccentrics in the northeast say that the Prapas regime does not now, nor has it ever, had the welfare of the peasant at heart; but then, the view from Washington is always more generous than the view from the field.

Spirited Defence

There is, however, a spirited defence of the computer as a national resource 'The argument against modern tools like the computer is, ultimately, an argument a computer is a substitute for reason; quite the contrary, it is a product of reason and it assists us in the application of reason. But to argue that some phenomena transcend precise measurement which is true enough - is no excuse for neglecting the arduous task of carefully analyzing what can be measured ..." It goes on like that, in prose Richard Nixon would admire.

This is not the book we are waiting for from this very very sensitive man who dominated the Pentagon in the Kennedy and Johnson

Badly Conceived

To a degree, "The Essence of Security" is Robert Mc-Namara's literary Bay of Pigs an arrogant, badly conceived attempt to make a book from a collection of without reflection and deliberately avoiding the really difficult issue of the war.

We await the thoughtful, personal, explicit, probably tortured account of life as it was, the thorough inquiry into how the choices were made, what the options were, who did what and why, how men behaved under stress, what the objectives were and how the government pursued Anyway, this book is not it. In the preface, McNamara pays tribute to "The members the defence-related committees of the congress, whose support, constructive criticism, and dissent are all essential to the vitality of the democratic process.' Oh,

The Wandering Toads Move To Find New Hunting Ground

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL

Director, Provincial Museum

August I saw a large number small frogs crossing country road some miles out mals on migration and if so where were they going?-B.

In all probability the creatures observed were toads, not frogs. The young of our common toad are known to occur in tremendous numbers i n at certain times whereas frogs are seldom numerous. Moreover, toads are Carl much more prone to wande upon water than are frogs and are often found some distance away from it. A close look will quickly enable one to distinguish between these two kinds of amphibians; the toad has a dry skin roughened with small projections whereas the frog appearance. In addition the toad has rather short hind legs and consequently moves in hops or with a crawling gait whereas his cousin has proportionately long limbs and usually leaps.

The reason why young toads are sometimes concentrated in great numbers is found in breeding habits. The borders of small lakes or in permanent pools or sloughs of stagnant water. Each female produces many hundreds of eggs with the result that in certain favored areas vast schools of tadpoles eventually since they are less dependent appear. They tend to congregate together and move through the shallow water like giant black shadow constantly changing shape as stragglers lag behind while leaders flow into new territory their constant search for Great numbers are eaten by has a somewhat slimy skin birds and predatory usually quite smooth in insects such as dragonfly nymphs and diving beetle larvae but still large numbers survive to transform toadlets at the end of their tadpole phase. For some reason, possibly because they hatch at the same time, all the "pollywogs" in any body of water develop at about the same rate and therefore metamorphose at about the same date. The result is that hordes of little toads suddenly appear along the shores of the breeding pools where they become concentrated in uncountable thousands.

They may begin to move fmmediately into the rounding countryside but if the weather is dry they may remain under shelter in the vicinity of the water until a shower provides enough moisture for travel. Their dramatic appearance after a rainfall apparently is the basis of the old belief that toads and frogs may fall to earth with the although there are waterspout to be deposited at distant point in a "cloudburst.'

Normally they disperse from the breeding ground by travelling away from the water through draws or low areas and if one of these happens to be crossed by a road numbers of the travellers will be seen at this point and many will be killed by passing traffic.

Strictly speaking this move ment is not a migration since the term migration is usually applied to a regular mass movement of a population from one locality to another, usually repeated each year and over the same route. In the case in question the toads are merely moving from their point of origin to establish a hunting ground some distance away where competition will severe. therefore a dispersal move ment which just happens to concentrate individuals along a special route by the configuration of the land-a route that may not be travelled again by these particular these particular

Indian communities present "poor contrast" in standard of living compared with non-Indian

This is one of the points made in the introduction to a Capital Region Planning Board report entitled Indian Communities and Land Use Planning.

"Modern housing, sanitation and other urban facilities which the non-Indian community accepts as part of their 20th century heritage are not avail-able for the majority of Indian people," the report states.

"This affects not only their health and welfare but these of the non-Indian community as Figures in the appendix to the report illustrate the comments.

The labor force at eight local Indian bands totals 234 aged between 15 and 55 and of them 15 live in reserves. Off reserve employment is not known.

84 EMPLOYED

Of those on the reserves, 84 were employed—at March, 1967 and 36 were unemployed with five unemployable and 31 stu-

The 1966 average annual income per capita in Canada was $1,400 and in B.C. $2,497. But for an Indian it was $563. The average annual income per employée in Canada in 1966 was $4,000, in B.C. it was $5,637 but for an Indian it was $1,361. Occupation of Indians breaks down to 109 craftsmen and laborers among the labor force of 151 living on reserves in this area. Only five were listed as managerial or professional.

In education, of 398 students 125 were in public schools, 122 in Indian day schools and the rest in Indian residential schools, parochial and vocational schools and kindergarten.

None were in university. Most Indians in this area live on reserves—896 compared with 184.

While the trend in British Columbia is for Indians to slowly move away from reserves into the surrounding community, recent figures in the Victoria area illustrate the opposite trend.

By TOM CARNEY

There are some strange rumblings being heard in the collective economic cooker of the British Columbia pulp and paper industry.

They are rumblings that cannot be ignored in an industry which produces more than 20 per cent of the total Canadian pulp and paper output and along with other forest products accounts for about 50 cents of every primary dollar produced in the province.

With current provincial production estimated at between 80 to 85 per cent capacity and all major producers polled experiencing production shut-downs or reductions, announcements are still being made about new multi-million dollar pulp and paper mills to be built. Ray Williston, minister of lands, forests and water re-sources, says such announcements even in these times of over-production and softeningmarkets are economic com

Industry spokesmen say partially at fault is a provincial forest policy that requires them to have their mills almost on line before they can secure crown-granted rights to the raw material.

This, says the industry, results in premature construc tion with millions of dollars in capital tied up before the market can support it.

Has the performance policy contributed to the current

Says Mr. Williston: "I think it likely it has and I don't back away from such criticism. "On the other hand, what is the alternative? All I would do as an administrator would be to tie up a given area of forest land for somebody who was going to do something some time in the future.

"This is public domain and it is public land and operate on the basis of performance.

I don't think I'm in any position to tie up areas for future development for any particular private group, says Williston.

Domestic dynamics added to the glut of pulp and paper on the world market are emphasizing B.C. producer problems. One of these is the mushrooming growth of the industry itself. The Council of Forest Industries estimates that $1.4 billion has been spent on capital construction in the B.C. pulp and paper insurry since 1949, not count-

Volkswagen eaps into the present.

With a fully automatic transmission

Alas.

The end of an era.

Now you can buy a Volkswagen Fastback, Squareback or Notchback sedan that you can drive without shifting. (Is nothing sacred?)

Instead of a stick shift, a chrome-consoled selection lever. Instead of a four-on-the-floor, a discreet PRN321.

It had to happen. But the reason it took so long to happen wasn't that we were stubborn. It's just that we weren't satisfied with the automatic transmissions available. So we built our own. It took ten years, but what we ended up with is an automatic transmission looked upon by some engineers as a work of art. In fact, so much design and research went into the works there's even a patent pending on part of it.

It's so beautifully balanced a model airplane engine is powerful enough to turn it.

It's the lightest automatic transmission in its class.

It's the one with the fewest moving parts. And it's been tested for over 2 million miles from the Arctic to the Equator. (To make sure that the VW automatic transmission would last as long as the VW.)

Of course, it costs a little more to get a Volkswagen 1600 with an automatic transmission.

But then, that's the price you pay for progress.

Sieg Heil! Reach the moon Get your finger on the trigger

NOW YOU CAN know what really happened when history was made. Because this is the story of the fastest 65 years on earth, of how and why your world came to be the way it is today. From the Boers to the Viet Cong. from crystal sets to colour TV, from Big Bertha to the Bomb, from Kittyhawk to Cape Kennedy, from Mrs. Pankhurst to the Pill-this is your story.

Editors A. J. P. Taylor and J. M. Roberts (tutor of history at Merton, Oxford) have brought together over 300 contributors from all over the world to write this 2,000,000 word, six volume history. It comes, not all at once, but sensibly, in 96 weekly parts. The first—price 60 cents—is at your newsdealer now.

No significant event or world trend since 1900 has been overlooked. Clearly and intelligently, the authors trace the drama of social revolution and human achievement. The agony of two World Wars, the growth of material wealth, the advance of modern medicine, the birth of new nations. The evolution of a world political system, the scientists' increasing mastery of the Universe, the dwindling role of Europe, The aim: to give you a truly international view of the 20th Century.

5000 pictures, over half in colour, many unpublished till now, have been painstakingly selected. Contemporary cartoons, stam posters and newspaper cuttings all help to make this the most superbly illustrated history ever. Schools and universities have already recognised the value of PURNELL'S HISTORY OF THE 20TH CENTURY to young people, Particularly because it comes weekly, 32 pages at a time. With the first issue you get FREE "The Century in Brief", a 32-page full-colour survey which tells all about the History.

Arthur Mayse

This will soon pass, but since we returned to our reasonably modern and well-appointed house, we have been haunted by a sensation that isn't easy to define

The ceilings seem too high. Its distances too

The feeling of being adrift in a place much too large for us is the direct result of a holiday in shrank to the > travel trailer. I don't mean a large one. For grandeur and of conveniences ours is no match for the streamlined rig we came upon in our recent ing in a lawn chair by his holiday abode when we hap-pened along. We got talking, and he revealed that it boasted not only a shower but a sure-enough bath. Further, he added, the bather wasn't required to soak with knees bent at a grasshopper angle.

We went away impressed, but not envious. For our part, we had about all the comfort we could absorb, sitting on chubby tires with rock guard hiked up to permit a picture window view of the mainland hills.

Anyway, it struck us that there's something suspect and even a trifle decadent about towing a tub along the highways. A sponge is so much lighter!

What we have is a kitchen that can be manipulated without shifting the feet. Ranged across it are a sink fitted with tap for the rare times when we are hooked up to piped water, and a marine-type pump that draws from a water-tank when we aren't. An icebox is fitted with shipwright cleverness under the three-burner propane stove, and next in line is a

The kitchen doubles as a drying-room for wet clothes. Turn around and you're in the living room-done in Danish, the makers insist—and on its twin settees of upholstered foam rubber, six hungry people have sat down to dine.

Come night, it's a bedroom. Guest-room? That too! It unfolds to make a sturdy overhead shelf, and we used to bump our heads on this before caution became in-

That brings up the subject of trailer manners, and here the keynote is economy of movement, It is, for instance, very bad form to crowd into kitchen clothes closet door while the cook's at work. Leaving possessions scattered about is frowned on, and if we must pass each other, we do so with elbows tucked into sides.

I expect none of these rules to the fellow whose boasting point is his tedious bath. No doubt he can stroll around his perambulating palace with elbows stuck out at right angles.

But again, for most trailer and truck-camper owners, comfort will suffice. We don't insist on absolute luxury.

The comfort I mentioned is the best sort of all, deriving as it does from contrast. To plumb it, you must come in from woods or waters dark, or maybe even a little after. The chances are that you will be tired, hungry, and like as not in autumn, cold clear through.

Then it's a wonderful thing to open a door, light a propane lamp, and set a kettle on to boil. Sitting soft, warming up with coffee or a hot toddy while dinner's cooking, you have returned to a very real, if temporary home.

I am not setting these facts down for trailer veterans, who need no such reminders. A point I'd like to make, though, that the trailer and its truck-mounted cousin have served to extend the outdoor season.

The camp we quitted on Monday used to be bare, after mid-September, as if a big broom had gone through.

When we left, it held three neat plywood - and - aluminum outfits, had sites reserved for another six due this week, and reservations for October.

For this changed condition, I'm grateful. So, you can be sure, is that other fellow I told you about. I can see him now coming in from a day of steelhead fishing in bitter weather to loll in his steaming tub.

He's welcome to it! Still, maybe in our next trailer, by a little crowding up here and cramping there . . .

THE CASUAL LOOK is in vogue at Victoria's new free school as teachers and students discuss what subjects will be studied. Classes began this week in a church hall at 520 Niagara Street, with 33 students and three full-time teachers. The free school is dedicated to liberally-oriented education, so smoking and freewheeling debate are in, rules on haircuts and dress out. The school is free in thought but fees range from $30 to $50 a month. Among subjects considered for study are a course on comparative religions and another on sex. Students have also expressed interest in pursuing music, art and other high school subjects.

Wooded Wonderland of Homes Looks Ahead ... No Sewers but the Pipes Are There

In Broadmead, the sewers are laid even though there is no service.

All utility wiring is underground and the developers must approve every house design.

It's that kind of a housing velopment, and it will cover 713 acres north and south of Royal Oak Avenue, between Patricia Bay Highway and almost as far as the southern shores of Cordova Bay.

The development will even tually house 6,000 people and cost upwards of $50 million. Saanich planner Tom Loney says that is "a good size anywhere" and while there have been bigger ones in North America, "the size makes it large even on the American scene."

It was three years ago that Broadmead Farms Limited, a syndicate headed by Gordon Rolston of Victoria, purchased the land from Rithet Consolidated for an undisclosed price. Since then, construction has started - and in some cases completed - on 31 houses and further 85 are in various stages of planning.

Three school sites have been agreed to with the school board and there will be a shopping centre, recreational facilities, over 150 acres of park and recreation area including the 96 acres encompassing the Rithet bog near the highway - and a possible 60 acres of multiple housing.

"Our goal is to establish a community with a very attractive and accommodating kind of environment and in a sense create a populated greenbelt," said Mr. Rolston. "By proper-sizing of lots and parks, we will preserve much of the greenbelt that exists, and there is a need for that in Greater Victoria. "A lot of residential land available does not have good natural appeal. Godon Head is virtually flat and tree-less in lots of places."

Broadmead will develop with single-family and multiple-family accommodation. although the latter will depend the arrival of trunk sewers.

The laterals are being laid for the new houses, running as far as the property line. Present sewage disposal is via septic tanks.

"Every lot is served with a non-operational sewer," Mr. Rolston, adding that doing it this way avoids higher costs later by cutting up streets for the pipes.

Areas being developed on the septic tank basis are being restricted to those where effluent will percolate into the ground. "We are trying to develop in areas that will allow good n areas that will allow good planning and at the same time percolate," he said. "We and everyone else feel the only answer to orderly development is sewers.". He said the 60 acres that ould be developed for multiple-family use could include court-type housing which in-creases the density but con-

Hasty Notes Show Victoria Scenes

By PENNY SAVER

When does a bride stop being a bride and become a wife? I have been piqued by this question ever since I was relatively newly-wed. I must have looked quite young for my age in those days for a woman old enough to be my mother was quite surprised when she learned I was a "Mrs." When I proudly pointed out that I had been married six months—a whole half year—she exclaimed, "Why you are only a bride." I was quite hurt. I thought of myself as a mature married

I was reminded of this incident by a charming couple I met who were honeymooning in Victoria. I helped them out by the way of street directions and ended up inviting them to dinner, I noticed right away that the young man had a "wife rather than a "bride" and that she was very proud to be thought of in this light. Just like me.

I wanted to mention this couple because they found a rather novel and interesting way of getting through their thank-you notes. Since they were honeymooning in Victoria, they used distinctly Victorian notepayer. Each hasty note is illustrated by a sketch by Victoria artist Peggy Walton are three lots to choose from: "British Columbia Notes Afloat," which deals with the water craft of the area; "Notes about Victoria" and "Notes About British Columbia". Each package of 10 notes and 10 envelopes costs $1. They come in a clear plastic case that fits easily into a purse or suitcase. Each picture is accompanied by a short explanation. The notes have plenty of room on them for writing, being folded in three to make five writing surfaces, each five inches by three and three-quarter inches. By using these attractive notepapers for her thank-you notes my friend can combine her thanks with a little description of the place

Year's Worth of Eskimo Prints

A while ago I mentioned calendar designs that are so popular that they are sold out at this early date. Not surprisingly, calendars showing Eskimo designs fall into this category. A large calendar with a coil binding at the top, the no print calendar is $3.50. Each month displays a new print designed by Eskimos living in the Cape Dorset area. An envelope is available with each calendar so it can be sent as a gift. This calendar is so popular that I had to order one specially. Every time I went in, the calendars were sold out and the next shipment hadn't yet arrived, I just couldn't hit Calendars showing color photographs of British Columbia are almost as popular. These are smaller than the Eskimo print calendars and cost $1, with one dealing exclusively with mountain scenes being $1.25. Those who prefer the soft water colors of British Columbia and Alberta by artist Ted Goodall will have to pay $1.50.

Children are a frequent subject on calendars and Cristoffersen's Indian children have been popular for many years. These calendars sell for $1. There is also a pocket memo showing one of these charming faces for 19 cents. It has blank pages (the easier to write on) and a handy currency guide. This memo is a very Canadian way of very Canadian way of reminding you of appointments while you are travelling

HE WEARS THE PANTS

PLYMOUTH, England (Renters) - British naval officer Nigel Tetley sailed out of this south coast port Monday on a solo voyage around the world —wearing a pair of women's paper panties.

WHY GROW OLD? By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN Studies indicate that the person whose weight is normal eats only stomach is empty, while the person who is obese eats even if the stomach is full. The appetite of the latter seems triggered by a leasant ting and a t m osphere, the time of day and flavorful food, among other things.

No doubt, these factors influence all of us to some extent, If you feel that they are important elements in your failure to reduce, perhaps the following suggestions will be helpful. 1. Shop daily for the exact amount of food required for that day only, for yourself and will be the presentation of a members of your family. If you have a family of four, buy cheque for $2,000 by president Mrs. W. There's no more stimulating September pickme-up than the discovery, in this age of everincreasing dependency on government largesse, that there are still many Canadians who will set out to right social wrongs without waiting for an official hand-out.

I made such a discovery this week when I visited the Pixie Shop at 800 Douglas Street. The people who run this store (it opened under new management Sept. 7) are as keen on making a profit as any store-keeper in town. What sets them apart from most commercial businesses is the fact that their revenue will be used to provide a community service

Organized by Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Robbins of Tyndall Avenue, 12 women, most of them members of the Vancouver Island Society for Hearing Handicapped Children, man the store throughout the week, each of them giving a weekly average of four hours. Mrs. Robbins is the society's treasurer and is determined to do everything she can to keep the group's ledger entries 'out of the red.

Store Will Finance New School

The reason for the group's venture into the field of business is a school which the society opened this month on Kings Road. Inside its walls four hearing handicapped children are currently being prepared to escape from the isolation that deafness brings.

The school is for children up to the age of six and its teacher, Mrs. R. D. Waterfield explains that unless training begins early the deaf and partially deaf child must be prepared to face frustrations that make day-to-day living an intolerable burden. A kindergarten teacher by profession she's well suited for her new position. She spent four years on the staff of Hartley House School for the Deaf in the English port of Plymouth before coming to Canada three years ago.

When I visited the store Mrs. Robbins was there with volunteers, Mrs. Bertha Cameron and Mrs. Vera Collier, They all stressed the agony a partially deaf child faces when he enters a normal class-room, Mrs. Cameron says "If he's unable to lip read he's often suspected of being a discipline problem because he's unable to hear all the teacher's commands. Learning to spell is often an almost insurmountable problem."

The trio explained that no government aid is available for the partially deaf child.

"They have to be without hearing before they're admitted to the centre in Vancouver."

Communication between the partially deaf child and the community around him is an uphill struggle. While the normal child can be expected to enter elementary school with a vocabulary of 1,200 to 1,500 words, his partially deaf counterpart may have been denied access to the conversation that made this possible. He could possibly be crippled educationally and socially for life.

The new school will fill the gap for partially deaf children in the area, At present, there is one class at Marigold Elementary School that trains children from the age of six to the time they're capable of taking their place in the average class-room. But, as the ardent saleswomen at the Pixle Shop emphasized, at six it is almost too late.

Pupils Being Led Out of Isolation

While Mrs. Waterfield leads her pupils along the path of easier communication between them and the world denied to them by deafness, Mrs. Robbins and her enthusiastic staff work unstintingly to raise the money which will pay her salary, cover the costs of transportation and supply muchneeded equipment.

They have a landlord who must have one of the biggest arts in the city. John Hawthorne has waived rental fees until such time as the venture is a financial success.

Local artists and craftsmen can join these determined women in their fight. The store hopes to sell local craft items on a consignment basis. Those interested in helping should phone Mrs. Robbins at 477-5539 during the evening. Volunteers would also be appreciated to act as stand-bys when extra help is needed in the store.

And, of course, they need customers. Business present, is slow but, optimistically, Mrs. Robbins and her staff are convinced their operation will be successful.

They tell you that they don't expect to make a fortune, just enough to ensure that Victoria's partially deaf children get an even break at living. If they reach this goal, they figure that this will be fortune enough.

New Nursing Director Introduced at Meeting

The new district director. Miss Lillian Randall, was introduced at the September meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses' board, Miss Randall succeeds Miss Eliza-beth Riddell,

After being introduced by president Mrs. C. Simpson Miss Randall reported that 616 admissions had been made during the past month, and a total of 260 referrals from Victoria's three major hospitals. She said that 211 conferences with head nurses, social workers, doctors and patients had been held. The consultant physiotherapist, Mrs. Thompson, had made 26 visits to patients.

It was noted that the VON office is now located on the first floor of Spencerhouse and provides adequate accommodation for the secretary and staff members.

Reports were given by treasurer D. Green and car committee member Mrs. V. Price. The minutes were read by honorary secretary Mrs. M. Jones.

MONTREAL, September 19th — Why didn't someone think of it before? I'm talking about the fabulous new Cheque Guarantee Card recently introduced by THE BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA. It is unique and fool-proof — because, it bears a full-colour photograph and signature of you, the holder, ... and, of course, the Scotiabank guarantees that your cheques are good as cash. To make application, simply go into any branch of The Bank of Nova Scotia and they'll photograph you with their special colour camera (for a nominal sum of $2.00) and in just a few days you'll have your own Scotiabank Cheque Guarantee Card. I find it a joy to have because it can be used anywhere—anytime—and no questions asked!

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY Newspaper Enterprise Assn. "Flag flying" is doubly dangerous. Sometimes you pay too much in penalties as a result, other times your opponents bid on and make their contract by taking advantage of the infortwo bids which are standard in modern expert play. They show a good six card suit and just below an opening bid in high card strength. North's double was normal and East raised to three hearts in an effort to jam his opponents' bidding.

West's two heart call one was going to shut West North East South 2♥ Dble 3♥ 4N.T. 5♥ Pass Pass 6♠ out Edgar Kaplan, one of the world's greatest players who sat South. Not that anyone needed to be a great player to find a bid with Edgar's and and Edgar found a four no-trump bid.

At this point West flew the flag with a five heart call.

It failed utterly, No

Sidney Lazard, who held the North hand, might well have doubled to show dislike for a slam. He and Edgar use the louble of an interference bid for this purpose, but Sidney rather fancied his hand and did not want to discourage Edgar's response was a jump to six spades and now all he had to do was to make it. West held the first trick and shifted to the six of clubs. Edgar won and started on trumps. The West bidding was enough to cause Edgar to try a finesse against East rather than a drop play. Then Edgar ran off the clubs and noted that West had started FOR SERVICE WITH A SMILE with four of the suit plus six hearts and one spade. That th left him with only two diamonds so a finesse against East's queen of diamonds was clearly indicated. Bill May Ban Polling News

WASHINGTON (AP)-A bill to prohibit the broadcasting or telecasting of election results or projections of results in federal elections in a state before that state's polls have closed was introduced in the House of Representatives Wednesday by 17 congressmen.

Representative John H. Buchanan (Rep.-Ala.), one of the sponsors, criticized the project of election results based on a small percentage of returns. He said its could influence the outcome of a national election.

Drug Addict 'A Menace To Himself'

A 54-year-old man who pleaded guilty to possession of morphine was sentenced Wednesday to eight months in jail. James Scoular, 550 Johnson as charged after police found two pounds of poppy seeds and heads in his possession Aug. 13. The substances were analyzed and found to contain morphine, police said. The accused admitted to the olice that he was an addict and that he was using the poppies to support his addiction.

Mr. Scoular told the court he picked the poppies in various places in Oak Bay.

acclimatize them gradually to the dry air and heat (70 degrees or higher) prevalent in average homes.

This sounds like a lot of work, and it is. But if you want house plants, and you put them outdoors for the summer (which is basically desirable for the health of most plants) you are likely to think nothing of the work involved.

Christmas and Easter cacti, poinsetttias, any of the hairy leaved plants like gloxinias, gynura, African violets and achimenes are the plants to be moved indoors before frost es around.

Hardier plants which could normally be planted in the garden permanently may stay outdoors longer.

This group includes azaleas which like to be out just as long in October as weather permits; also the lovely violet flowered South American tibouchina, almost hardy enough to stay out all winter in sheltered corners which are sun traps but not wind or frost traps.

For safety these two should be returned to the house by the end of October at the latest.

Which was the Paleozoic Era

This geological are followed the Archeozoic and Proterozoic Eras that date back hillions of years into the earth's dim, remote past. Its name, the Paleozoic Era, is coined from words meaning "old" and "life" and its rocks contain some of the earliest fossil records that can be identified clearly as the remains of living things. We can, however, infer from certain minerals that simpler life forms existed through countless ages during the two earlier chapters. The Paleozoic Era dawned more than 500 million years ago and it inherited from the past a multitude of assorted simple life forms, perhaps similar to the one-celled or ganisms that still exist in our teeming world Most modern scientists sus nect that the dry land of those far-off days was more or less linked togethed in a single continent over the South Pole. Certainly the earth's goegraphy did not resemble a modern map. The world's major mountains were in what are now Canada, Wisconsin and Minnesota. During later periods of the Paleozoic chapter, there were massive uplifts of the earth's crust in Greenland and Northern Europe and India. The southern and finally the northern arm of Appalachians arose. Several times vast areas of land were invaded by the sea, and near the end of the long chapter, parts of India and Africa, Australia and South America were covered by the glaciers of a monstrous ice age

Age of Reptiles

The Paleozoic Era spanned more than 300 million years and s subdivided into more than half a dozen geological periods. It opened with the Cambrian Period during which the most complex creatures were the asorted trilobites that lived in the ancient, almost fresh water seas. The first backboned animals arrived in a later period and, sometime during the

Naturally a detailed account of the immense Paleozoic Era cannot be detailed in a few paragraphs. What's more, the records of much of this remote era are not easy to define. A million years of so is but a wink in geological history. The general pattern of the advancing life story is plain. But earth scientists cannot estimate precisely the length of each

How can clouds stay up in the air?

Most of the things in this world are very tiny. Compared with these minuscule objects your body is a monstrous giant. The air is made of zillions of tiny gas particles. But these particles are so small and the airy mixture is so thin that we tend to forget that it is there True, we notice it when the forceful wind blows in our faces. But every time we move even a finger we push around zillions of gas particles with no trouble at all. Certainly the filmy air is too thin to hold our bulky bodies above the ground

But remember all those tiny objects. Some of them are misty droplets of water.

A cloud is made of tiny misty droplets of water. The zillions of these cloud droplets are separated and far apart. Each one is small enough to stay aloft in the at least for a time, Actually it is being pulled down by the earth's gravity, but the air slows down its fall. With other droplets, it can stay aloft for days while the misty cloud is blown along like a flying carpet by the breezes. But slowly, very slowly, the cloud is sinking. At last it may settle on a slope and become a fog. But as a rule, the cloudy mist changes into rain before this happens. And raindrops tumble down because they are too big and heavy to float aloft in the filmy air.

Back to Nature CHILDREN'S MOVIE GUIDE Call Made To Girl Guides

TORONTO (CP) - The Girl Guides have begun a back-tonature program that they hope will eventually reach all guides. They also hope to show leaders there is a lot of nature in the backyard, and that a wilderness setting isn't necessary.

The second stage in the program took place in late summer, when 40 leaders from all across the country attended a specially tailored nature school put on for them by the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation

Authority. The authority's usual pro-gram for teachers has been adapted to suit guide philoso phy and badge requirements, says Marguerite Hudson, sec-retary to the national camping committee and the outdoor workshop planning committee. The tailoring was done after a pilot course was given as the first stage in the

"You don't have to be an expert to take children outside, and you don't have to a huge conservation area. You can teach them in a back yard or a school yard 'We also want to show that you don't have to have the type of resource we have in Ontario. You can take the same program, adapt it to your mountains or prairies and find people to help you teach it. PROGRAM EXTENDED

In their week at the 900acre Albion Hills conservation area, the 40 leaders heard lectures on identifying wild life, plants and their environments, about land use and conservation, about pioneer crafts and outdoor activities. Mrs. Hudson says plans call for filtering down similar programs until eventually they reach local leaders and girls. She says the housewives who are usually neighborhood guide company leaders will find they don't have to be nature experts, they can learn with the girls and get help from people in the community.

In the meantime, there will also be a camp advisers' conference in Rosedale, B.C., in 1969, as part of the total program, reaching through several channels.

Mrs. Hudson says the program beginnings go back to 1965, when concern was felt that outdoor education had almost faded from guiding. A committee was formed to look into the situation, and these branching projects are the result.

Mrs. Hudson says this is the first time the conserva-tion authority has worked so tion authority has worked so extensively with a national organization, and that the results are being watched with interest by others. One of the authority's main aims in such work is the spread of conservation knowledge and practice.

The guides have had financial help for the program from the federal advisory council on fitness and amateur sport.

CZECH MINISTER Curbs on Land Speculation

VIENNA - Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek, target of furious attacks from Moscow, has resigned, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported today.

Hajek was apparently the first victim of a rumored purge list drawn up by the Kremlin.

Meanwhile a meeting of Czech and Soviet leaders set for Friday in Moscow was postponed until next week. No reason was given Czech Premier Oldrich Cernik will act as foreign minister replacing Hajek, according to the Czech news agency.

The agency added that, on the recommendation of the government, the president had dismissed Karel Hoffman as head of the Central Board of Communications. It was not clear from the CTK dispatch whether Premier Cernik would act as foreign minister permanently. Hajek, 55, has been a target of Soviet criticism since he eaded his country's case at the United Nations following the Warsaw Pact invasion Aug. 20-21.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia accused him of working for the Nazis during the Second World War and said he now was an ally of the "dark forces of reaction and ounter-revolution."

Hajek was in Yugoslavia at the time of the invasion.

Saanich Motion Wins Support

By JIM HUME Times City Hall Reporter

VANCOUVER - Municipal representatives today voted overwhelmingly in favor of a study of possible controls to halt excessive land speculation.

In supporting the Saanich resolution, Union of B.C. Municipalities delegates went against an executive recommendation that the resolution be defeated. The executive argued that any-controls introduced would be "almost unenforceable."

The stand brought charges that the executive was running away from controversial issues Ald. John Cannon of North Cowichan asked how the execu-

"I think this executive is again running away from a controversial issue, from a decision they know will be unpopular," he said.

SERIOUS SITUATION

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, who moved the resolution, said she realized it would touch off controversy and likely have stormy going.

"But this is an extremely serious situation and all that we are asking is that the executive study the problem and bring in some recommendations." She won support from Ald.

Pat Flattery of North Vancou-ver who asked that the executive also study the possibility of recommending heavier taxes on land to control speculation while reducing taxes on improvements.

Language Restrictions Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) Minister Trudeau said today he hopes that rather than Quebec restricting the privileges it now grants in the province for the use of English, other provinces will extend privileges in the use of French.

He was replying in the Commons to questions. Robert Thompson (PC-Red Deer), the former Social Credit leader, about Quebec's plan to make French the official working language of the province.

Mr. Thompson asked whether the federal govern-ment, in preparing the languages bill it intends to present to Parliament this session, had consulted Quebec.

LONDON (AP)-The Bank of England today cut its lend ing rate to 7 per cent from 7½ per cent. The cut was taken as a sign that the British economy is on the mend.

The bank lending rate governs all financial transactions

A cut had been expected in the wake of Britain's improved trade performance during August.

The rate had stood at 7½ per cent since March 21. From November, 1967, until March it had been at a record 8 per cent as part of the retrenchment program enforced by devaluation of the pound.
